Gruesome details of murders revealed

Defence lawyer Joel Pink speaks with reporters about his client Glen Race at Halifax Supreme Court on Monday. JEFF HARPER/METRO

Glen Race. Doctors warned of potential violence, court hears

Two women in the court's front row leaned on one another as they cried quietly, wiping tears from their eyes as a Crown attorney showed a photo of the car where Paul Knott died six years ago.

Knott's daughter Jennifer and other family members heard gruesome details surrounding the Timberlea man's death in Nova Scotia Supreme Court on Monday, the beginning of a hearing to determine if Glen Race was criminally responsible for killing Knott, 44, and Trevor Brewster, 45, in May 2007.

Race pleaded guilty to first- and second-degree murder in September, but his lawyer Joel Pink filed an application to declare him not criminally responsible, something the Crown supports.

The 30-page agreed statement of facts said Knott had been stabbed to death after meeting Race on Citadel Hill, while Brewster from Cole Harbour was bludgeoned and stabbed to death at Frenchman Lake a few days later.

Race was silent during his appearance, wearing a beige collared shirt with his hair slicked back on top.

Details on where the bodies were hidden, Race's flight to the U.S., and borrowed library books on Mexico, the Spanish language, and private investigations were presented.

The facts presented by the Crown said Race's early years were "unremarkable," and there was no sign of family abuse. He was co-captain of the high school football team, and it was not until September 2001 that his behaviour changed dramatically and he dropped out of Dalhousie University.

He was diagnosed with paranoid schizophrenia in 2002, but refused medication and doctors in the Nova Scotia Hospital found him difficult to assess.

This became a pattern over the next few years, as Race spent time in and out of psychiatric hospitals and became more violent.

Race threw things at his father and carried a knife at all times, the court heard. During a stay at the QEII hospital in 2005, doctors said Race believed in demons, that he had the power to curse others, that trees spoke with him, and that he "almost equated himself with Christ."

A doctor assessed Race in 2005 and said "the potential for ... deterioration and increased risk for violence is there."

In 2007, the court heard Race told his mother he had the "power to forgive sin," but that he never would.

Race was serving a life sentence for the 2007 shooting death of Darcy Manor in New York before returning to Halifax in 2010 to face these charges.

Crown lawyer Mark Heerema said three psychiatrists will testify in court this week that Race is not criminally responsible for the murders. HALEY RYAN/METRO

Timeline outlines when, how victims were killed

May 1 to 15. Knott and Brewster were stabbed to death after chance encounters with Race: Crown

haley.ryan@metronews.ca

A 30-page agreed statement of facts was read in Nova Scotia Supreme Court in Halifax on Monday, detailing the actions of Glen Race, Paul Knott and Trevor Brewster.

Below is a timeline that both the Crown and defence agree to regarding the men's actions across 15 days in 2007, when Race encountered and was later charged in the killing of Knott and Brewster.

Race has pleaded guilty to the two murders, but is arguing he wasn't criminally responsible.

May 1: The first day Race stays at his new apartment on North Street in Halifax. It's his first time living away from parents in years.

May 1: Knott goes shopping with his then 17-year-old daughter before dropping her off at her job in Bayer's Lake. Knott was a "devoted family man" who loved his two children, Jennifer and Andrew. He served in the navy, including tours in the Persian Gulf, until retiring in 2003.

May 1 to early morning May 2: Race and Knott meet one another by chance at Citadel Hill in Halifax. It is later determined Race killed Knott by stabbing him with a knife in the thigh, chest, neck and throat in the front seat of Knott's car. Race hides Knott's body in a forested area of Mill Cove.

May 2: Race drives Knott's car around Halifax to multiples shops, including Superstore, to buy laundry detergent. He buys a buck knife from the Walmart on Mumford Road.

May 2: Jennifer Knott calls police to report her father missing.

May 2 to early morning May 3: Race hides Knott's car on Old Guysborough Road behind the airport.

May 3: Race meets his father Mark in Fall River and goes with him to the family home in Windsor.

May 4: Brewster returns to Halifax from a week's vacation in the Dominican Republic. Brewster worked at the Steak & Stein on Young Street in Halifax for 24 years and was an avid gardener. He loved travelling and pets "of all kinds," especially his dog Polar.

May 5: Knott's body is found.

May 7: Police find Knott's car and the knife used to kill him with Race's fingerprints on it. Brewster goes to work at Steak & Stein for the first day of manager training.

May 7 to early morning May 8: Race meets Brewster by chance at Frenchman Lake in Burnside. It is later determined Brewster died from blunt-force injuries to his head and stab wounds to his neck, head and throat. Race hides the body under a wharf at the edge of the lake and drives away in Brewster's car.

May 9: Robenia Brewster calls police to report her brother missing. Brewster's body is found.

May 10: Race illegally crosses the Quebec border into the U.S.

May 15: Race is arrested after attacking a Texas Border Patrol agent and attempting to cross the border into Mexico.

Residents unsettled after firebombing

Neighbours of a Fairview home hit with two Molotov cocktails early Monday admitted they were still a little rattled several hours after the incident occurred.

Halifax Regional Police say there could've been "catastrophic consequences" after two bottles with a fire accelerant were thrown at the home on McFatridge Road just before 2 a.m., which left the living-room window smashed.

At the time several people, including a group of children, were in the residence. Fortunately the bottles didn't ignite and were found below the window.

"Of course it's concerning," said one unidentified neighbour who lives with his young daughter a few residences up from the targeted home.

He said he noticed a couple had moved into the home, which houses several apartments, about six or seven weeks ago. Up until Monday the location hadn't attracted trouble, he added.

"But, obviously they have problems."

A K-9 unit searched for the assailants but they couldn't be located.

Police spokesman Const. Pierre Bourdages said the homeowner is co-operating with police but they have no idea why the house was targeted.

A woman living in a home on neighbouring Percy Street said she was unaware of the incident late Monday morning. She said she called the police over an incident that occurred at the location recently.

She said a group of young men had congregated at the house and were yelling at someone inside to come out.

"I'm really surprised but I'm not freaking out," the woman said regarding Monday's firebombing attempt. "I'm more disappointed, but it is a problem area. You hate to generalize, but it is."

Afghan veteran says feds failing to help injured former soldiers

Cpl. Shane Jones. Vet says planned cutbacks at Veterans Affairs will make an already bad situation worse

A military veteran who suffered multiple injuries when his vehicle rolled over in Afghanistan says the Canadian government is failing former soldiers by not providing the care they need.

Cpl. Shane Jones says he has been assigned more than three Veterans Affairs case workers since June and has had about eight since he was medically released from the Forces in 2008. The 38-year-old father of three said that has impeded his treatment for post-traumatic stress disorder and a traumatic brain injury he sustained when his vehicle rolled over in Afghanistan in 2005.

He said he wanted to speak out at a news conference Monday in Fall River because he knows of many injured veterans who are struggling with bureaucratic red tape and regular upheaval in their care.

"There's no way they're ever going to get better if every couple of months they're getting a new case manager, which basically means they have to start at ground zero," he said.

Jones wants the federal government to stop planned cutbacks at Veterans Affairs and to beef up services for injured vets. "The thing that's making me come forward is that you're going to cut back all these people and with the people you have now, you can't even manage to do your job properly," he said.

A spokesman for Veterans Affairs Minister Julian Fantino said the minister has asked "to reach out to see what additional support and assistance can be provided to Cpl. Jones and his family." He insisted services standards would not change as a result of the cuts. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Nova Scotia family keeps finding supernovas

An artist interpretation illustrates the explosion of SN 2006gy, in what scientists are calling the brightest supernova ever recorded. GETTY IMAGES/NASA

Rarely can someone say they've found a previously undiscovered supernova.

But one Nova Scotia family says they have made a few of those extraordinary finds.

Paul Gray and his children Nathan and Kathryn have all discovered supernovas, a bright explosion after the death of a star.

Paul and Kathryn were both the youngest to do so at the time of their discoveries, according to the International Astronomical Union. Now Nathan is poised to dethrone his sister.

The family's most recent feat came last Wednesday, when 10-year-old Nathan was analyzing galaxies at his home in Greenwood. "I had found something, so me and my dad checked it out, and it seemed to be something, so it was pretty exciting," Nathan said.

Nathan and his sister analyze images of hundreds of galaxies as part of a project with family friend and astronomer David Lane, who owns the Abbey Ridge Observatory in Halifax.

Confirmed

The Royal Astronomical Society of Canada said in a news release that the discovery has been posted on the International Astronomical Union's website and has been confirmed by U.S. and Italian observers.

Lane said he decides which galaxies are photographed — from 50 to half a billion light years away — and the images are uploaded to a website that the Grays access from their home. The siblings then compare new images to older images to see if any new objects have appeared.

Lane says Nathan may claim his sister Kathryn's title by 33 days — who also discovered a supernova at age 10 — as the youngest person to co-discover a supernova.

But first it will need to be designated by the International Astronomical Union, and that can take some time, if it happens at all, said Lane.

Raylene Rankin to be honoured posthumously

The late Raylene Rankin will be honoured posthumously with the Order of Nova Scotia.

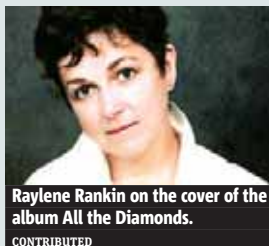

Premier Stephen McNeil announced on Monday the five individuals who will be invested into the Order in Halifax.

Also named are Eldon George, Fred George, Cecil Edwin Kinley and Hetty van Gorp.

A native of Mabou, Rankin died in 2012 after a battle with cancer.

After graduating from Dalhousie Law School in 1987, and being admitted to the bar in 1988, she and four of her siblings released The Rankin Family in 1989.

Economic outlook

Region banks on U.S. recovery

The Atlantic Provinces Economic Council's annual economic outlook says the Atlantic region should benefit from stronger demand for exports in 2014.

The report says a forecast from the International Monetary Fund predicts world growth will increase from 2.9 per cent in 2013 to 3.6 per cent in 2014.

The region's largest customer, the U.S. market, is expected to recover with growth levels of 2.6 per cent in 2014 as fiscal restraint eases. The council says housing starts in the U.S. are also expected to increase by about 25 per cent next year which should benefit Atlantic lumber producers. THE CANADIAN PRESS

'Motorcycle rapist'. Correctional Service probes prisoner's death

The Correctional Service of Canada is investigating the death of an inmate in New Brunswick who was serving time for sexual assaults in Nova Scotia in the late 1980s.

Nadine Boucher, a spokeswoman for the Correctional Service of Canada, says John Arthur O'Brien died at a hospital in Moncton last Thursday.

RCMP Staff Sgt. James Bates says officers were called to the prison after O'Brien was seriously injured earlier that day, although he wouldn't elaborate on the nature of his injuries.

Bates says the case is being investigated as a sudden death and police do not suspect foul play.

O'Brien was serving a 37-year sentence that began in

Abandoned cats and dogs. More animals running wild in Cape Breton: SPCA

The number of abandoned animals in the Cape Breton Regional Municipality is at a crisis point, the manager of Nova Scotia SPCA's Cape Breton branch says.

Branch manager Jeff Dursi presented the SPCA's annual report to the CBRM's general committee meeting Monday. He noted the branch currently has a waiting list of 900 cats that people want to drop off at the shelter and they have seen a dramatic increase in the number of abandoned cats and dogs.

"We have a lot more dogs left on the sides of the road, especially in late August, early September, we noticed a substantial increase out of the blue," Dursi said. "We have a

Nova Scotia Music Week. Annual event crossing causeway for the 1st time

Nova Scotia Music Week will cross the causeway for the first time in its history later this week.

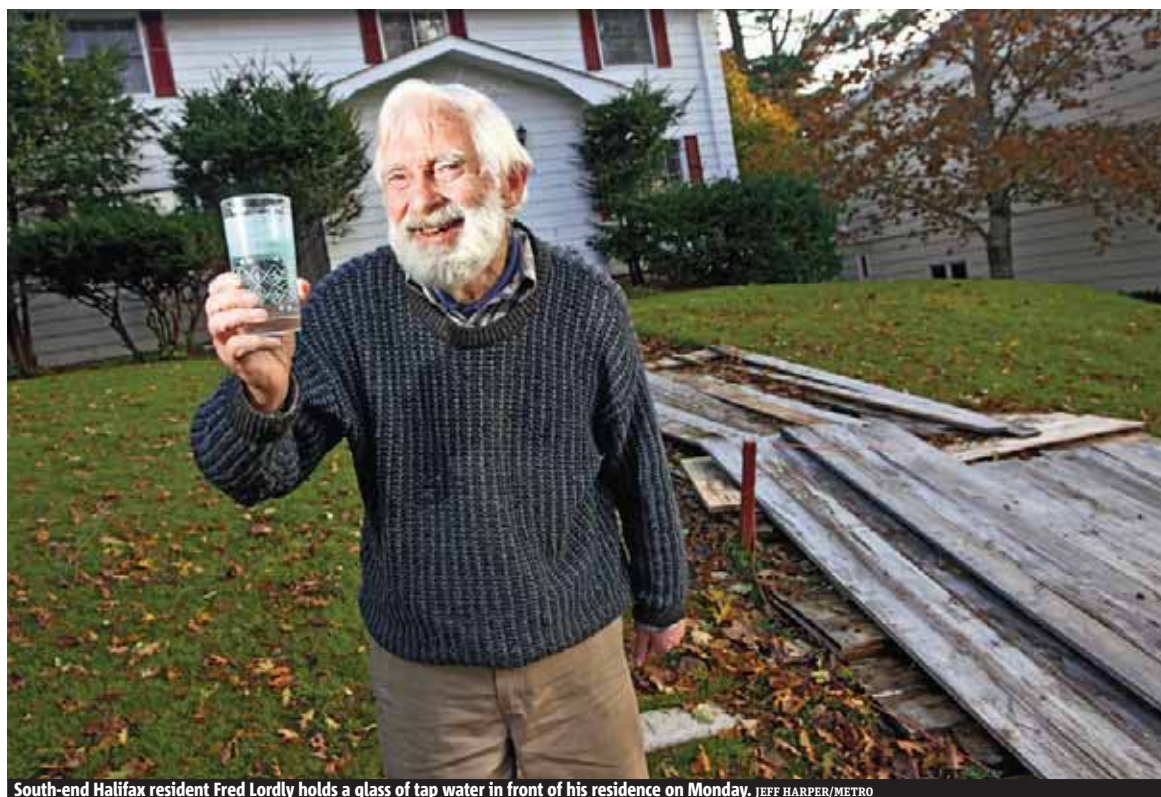

Cape Breton's Gordie Sampson will host a songwriters' circle in Sydney.

The annual four-day celebration of Nova Scotia's music industry will be hosted in Sydney, beginning Thursday and concluding Sunday night.

Scott Long, executive director of Music Nova Scotia, said that for a number of years Halifax served as home-base for the event, but since 2006 it has travelled around to other regions of the province.

"Once we left Halifax, we saw the event start to grow and come into its own and a bidding process came into play for communities interested in hosting the event so they'd have to read our bid document and meet the criteria and put forward a bid," he said. CAPE BRETON POST

Dispute with city. Dry spell ends for 82-year-old Halifax man after local company steps in

halifax@metronews.ca

Three months after being left high and dry by the municipal water utility, an elderly man living in Halifax's south end once again has running water in his home, thanks in large part to the charity of a local business.

Schooner Excavation Ltd. said it would help turn the taps back on for 82-year-old Fred Lordly, who had been living without water at his house on Emscote Drive since July 29.

"I heard about (Lordly's situation) in the media a few months ago," said Schooner president and co-owner Darrell Gallagher. "I thought it would be a nice thing to do, to help him out."

Halifax Water turned off the water to Lordly's 45-year-old house following a longstanding dispute over unlawfully criss-crossed piping.

According to the utility, the sewer and storm water pipes were improperly installed when Lordly built his house in 1968, meaning the octogenarian was illegally discharging untreated waste water into the Northwest Arm.

"We tried to work with Mr. Lordly for two years to no avail," said James Campbell, a spokesman with Halifax Water.

Ultimate responsibility for these types of repairs lies with the homeowner, he said.

And of the seven homeowners in the area with the same piping problems, Campbell said Lordly was the only one who refused to pay for the work to be done.

"We take no pleasure in disconnecting anyone's water service," said Campbell. "(But) we have regulations we have to follow and we're obliged to follow them."

"I feel it was a lot of nonsense, a lot of nonsense," said Lordly. "A lot of waste of their time and a lot of misery for me."

Gallagher estimated the value of the donated repair work — which he anticipated to be finished this weekend — at somewhere between $4,000 and $10,000.

Lordly said he was very appreciative for the excavator's help, but said he ultimately believes the city failed him.

"Everyone should fight (for) what's right," said the longtime Halifax resident. "When they think they're right they should fight to the end."

"And I was prepared to fight to the end."

Man charged for illegal selling

A 35-year-old Nova Scotia man is facing charges after police say someone was illegally selling medical alert devices.

Kings District RCMP say Thomas Peter Fennessey is charged with three counts under the Nova Scotia Direct Seller's Act after police received complaints over the summer of a possible fraud.

The RCMP say several people called complaining in late August about someone seeking a large amount of money in advance for the purchase of medical alarm equipment and monitoring services.

Police investigated and say the seller didn't hold a permit to sell the equipment under the direct seller's act.

Toronto. Ford theatre has some applauding, others searching for the exit

Canada's largest city remained divided over its embattled mayor Monday after a public apology from Rob Ford failed to quell the controversy over an alleged crack video.

While some saw his words as the push needed to move past a long-running drug scandal, others said little had changed for Toronto.

After first saying he was sorry on his weekend radio show, the mayor took to the airwaves again Monday morning to repeat his apology for public drunkenness and texting while driving.

As before, however, Ford dodged questions about the alleged video that appears to show him smoking crack.

For some Toronto residents, Ford's latest statements did little to change their views.

"Rob Ford's 'apology' sounds to me like just blowing smoke. Never mind what kind of smoke," one person said on Twitter.

But Ford's supporters continued their staunch defence of the mayor.

"Despite whatever Mayor Rob Ford has done in his personal life, he is still a good mayor and people should leave him alone," tweeted one woman.

"The end result is that he is saving tax payers money," said another.

Toronto's deputy mayor said Ford's "blanket apology" and an acknowledgment that his personal lifestyle was affecting the life of the city was a good first step.

The hacktivist group Anonymous is demanding an RCMP officer who was caught on video appearing to utter a racial slur during anti-fracking protests in New Brunswick be fired.

Two weeks ago, members of the Elsipogtog First Nation and opponents of shale gas development clashed with police in Rexton, N.B. Five police cruisers were destroyed and dozens of protesters were arrested.

The event drew the attention of Anonymous, who launched #OpFrackOff in support of the protests. The group has previously become involved in other high-profile Canadian cases, including Idle No More and the death of Rehtaeh Parsons in Nova Scotia.

This time, Anonymous has focused on an RCMP officer who appears in a video to utter a derogatory slur while confronting Mi'kmaq activists on Oct. 17. In the video obtained by the group, an unidentified Mountie can be heard telling protesters that "Crown land belongs to our gov-

Const. Jullie Rogers-Marsh of the New Brunswick RCMP confirmed that one of their officers uttered the slur. She said as soon as the Mounties became aware of the incident, the officer in question was sent home and an internal investigation was launched.

Ousted president of Egypt defiant in court

After four months in secret detention, deposed President Mohammed Morsi defiantly rejected a court's authority to put him on trial Monday, saying he still was Egypt's leader and that those who overthrew him should face charges instead.

The trial, which was interrupted twice on its first day by shouting in the raucous courtroom, was then adjourned until Jan. 8 to allow lawyers time to review the case against Morsi and his 14 co-defendants — all prominent members of the Muslim Brotherhood.

Morsi, Egypt's first freely elected president, had been held at an undisclosed location since the military ousted him in a coup July 3. His appearance in court represented a step by the military-backed authorities toward granting him due process in the face of mounting criticism by rights groups.

Morsi and his co-defendants face charges of inciting the killing of protesters who massed outside the presidential palace in December and demanded

If convicted, Morsi and the other defendants could face the death penalty.

Child-porn sting. 54 Canadians snared by fake 10-year-old girl

A sting operation has turned up dozens of Canadians among thousands of adults willing to pay to watch a 10-year-old Filipino girl perform sex acts on a webcam, an international children's rights group said Monday.

The group Terres des Hommes, operating out of Amsterdam, said 54 Canadians were among more than 1,000 adults from 71 countries identified during the 10-week project.

"It's frightening to see that these people think that the Internet is a completely lawless space," said one of the researchers for the group, who identified himself only as Peter for fear of reprisals.

"The most shocking part of this — aside from the horrific child-abuse material that we were sometimes sent — was just the fact that it was so easy to catch these people. They have zero risk perception."

Detailed identification information — including names, addresses, telephone numbers and email addresses — was now in the hands of Interpol for passing on to national law-enforcement authorities to investigate, Peter

Predators

In all, the researchers identified more than 1,000 predators — including 254 Americans and 110 Brits.

- They said they would have been able to ID far more if they had more time and resources.

told The Canadian Press from Amsterdam.

Canada's Criminal Code prohibits accessing child pornography and child prostitution, so the law should be adequate for prosecution, the group said.

In all, 20,172 adults offered to pay between $1 and $100 using untraceable prepaid credit cards to have "Sweetie" perform a sex show via webcam — despite being told at least twice that she was only 10.

Until now, Peter said, he believed police had a good handle on the webcam sex tourism. The project has shown that's not the case, he said. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

And the Oscar goes to ... Netflix for The Square?

Netflix has acquired the first-run rights to a documentary on the Egyptian protests in Cairo's Tahrir Square, signalling a new push by the subscription company to program movie premieres.

The Square will debut exclusively on Netflix early next year. The documentary depicts the tumult of the Egyptian Revolution beginning in 2011.

In a letter to shareholders this year, Netflix executives said the company would expand its growing library of original content beyond new TV shows like House of Cards and would seek to add "broadly appealing documentaries."

The Square is playing in New York and Los Angeles theatres. The short theatrical run will qualify the film, an award-winner at the Sundance and Toronto film festivals, for Oscar consideration.

Italy-based pasta maker Barilla is pledging to improve diversity after protests were sparked by an executive's claim the company would never feature ads depicting gay families.

Waterloo, Ont. BlackBerry hires turnaround expert after failure to get a buyer

A well-connected U.S. tech industry veteran with a track record on turnarounds, John Chen has been named to lead troubled Canadian mobile telecommunications giant BlackBerry Ltd., the company announced Monday.

As executive chairman, Chen will be responsible for its strategic direction, strategic relationships and organizational goals, the Waterloo-based company said.

The move came as BlackBerry failed to attract a buyer for the company by Monday's deadline, throwing its future into doubt.

Its largest shareholder, Fairfax Financial Holdings, along with other investors, has thrown it a $1-billion US lifeline through the purchase of convertible debentures.

Chen will also become interim chief executive officer when the debenture deal closes, likely in two weeks, while the company searches for a successor to departing CEO Thorsten Heins.

Hipster for hire

Yeah, I work... at perfecting
the creases on my

British Columbia's provincial government got a lot of attention in 2012 for transit ads declaring "hipster is not a full-time job."

The jury is still out, but it can certainly be a lucrative temp job.

Modelling agency Voltage Entertainment placed a Vancouver Craigslist ad Oct. 8, looking for the face of brand ambassador "Hipster Randy."

Said hipster would be paid $2,500 a month and be on call for whenever the newest vintage clothing, vinyl record, craft brewing, organic farming operation needs a hunky, unshaven, flannel-clad, thick-framed-glasses-wearing man to give them instant "too cool to care" street cred.

Whatever.

Temp Accepts a Slightly Random Date with Chinese Guy

Today was Thursday. In the future, every day of the week will be Thursday. We're all going to be working to the grave and we all know it so days of the week will be meaningless. I call it Permaturus — I just happened to the future before most people. Permaturus isn't totally bad, but without the Internet it would be truly horrible.

My morning highlight was when Kyle the bike courier showed me his new forearm tat, a bleeding dagger, which sounds cliché but it was actually kind of hot, even though Kyle's not my type. Everyone in the office thinks we're some Big Item, and when we flirt everybody turns into gum-chewing zoo visitors staring at the chimp cage hoping something frisky transpires.

Then the day quickly went sideways. First, my daily ride home bailed on me — my sister, Amy, who just landed a gig teaching yoga for tweens at the now-empty Barnes & Noble on Route 34.

"Shanny, I hear buses are great these days. Like hotels, practically. You can blog about it — it's free content — you own your bus ride!"

Second, Kevin Taylor's and Andy Kimura's flight back from Beijing was grounded for a day because of a bird flu scare: scheduling mess. Third, there was a Norovirus outbreak at the Bunmeister during yet another lunchtime farewell party.

At 4:30, while I was puzzling over how to bus it home, the Danimal hobbled up to my desk, obviously deeply regretting his Bunmeister's Cheesetastic Meatball-icious sub.

"Dan, maybe you need some of those super-drugs they give to people on cruise liners."

"Shannon, I need you to do some overtime for me — for the company."

"Look, I'm not talking hookers and blow; I'm talking chicken fingers and 3-for-1 margaritas ..."

Twice my regular hourly rate? "Sure. What is it?"

"I need you to take a client out for drinks and dinner."

"What? No!"

"Shannon, here's the thing, all of us are dying and this guy has to be taken care of."

"Meaning?"

"Look, I'm not talking hookers and blow; I'm talking chicken fingers and 3-for-1 margaritas at Mister McFunbury's out by the off-ramp that takes you out to the oil refineries. This guy's not high up the food chain, but we can't not do something."

I stared him down. "OK, one: a week of free taxi cabs. Two: cash up front for the food — my cards are all maxed out. Three: drinks, dinner, dessert and goodbye. Two hours max."

"Agreed."

"Who is he, anyway?"

HOW TO LOOK MORE ATTRACTIVE

There are many benefits to surrounding yourself with a great group of friends: Companionship, emotional support, always having someone to drive you home after you've had too many glasses of wine. But did you know that your pals also have the potential to make you appear more physically attractive?

Researchers at the University of California, San Diego, recently conducted a study to determine the validity of the so-called "cheerleader effect." Popularized by on-screen ladies' man Barney Stinson from the TV show How I Met Your Mother, the theory suggests that people seem better-looking when seen in a group context. I'll ignore my reservations about why academics are investing time and resources into proving the scientific merit behind the deranged ramblings of a television character, and get to the details.

Psychological scientists Drew Walker and Edward Vul con-

SHE SAYS

Jessica Napier
metronews.ca

ducted five separate experiments among 130 undergraduate students at the university to evaluate how people's perceived beauty might vary depending on whether they're alone or in a group. Participants were asked to rate the physical attractiveness of 100 individuals by looking at a variety of photographs. Sometimes the subjects were shown in a group portrait with two other people, other times the pictures were cropped to show the person alone. Overall, test subjects scored about two percent higher in terms of looks when shown as part of a group. Not an overwhelming beauty-boost, but statistically interesting enough to make me reconsider posting so many selfies online.

While the findings of the study might seem somewhat predictable — people who are socializing with others usually appear happy, confident and thus more appealing than solitary loners — there's actually a bit more science to this phenomenon. The rationale behind the cheerleader effect has to do with our brain's subconscious tendency to merge facial features when looking at more than one person. We tend to read faces in group settings as ensemble representations and diminish individual's idiosyncrasies in the process. Unattractive characteristics that would stand out if seen in isolation are leveled out to give everyone an average group face. In this case, being average-looking is actually a good thing.

And while the 'cheerleader' label brings to mind acrobatic females in short skirts, the theory actually applies to both sexes. Men and women were consistently regarded as better looking when in the company of two or more people of the same gender.

"Having a few wingmen or women may indeed be a good dating strategy" the researchers are quoted as saying.

"The effect is definitely small, but some of us need all the help we can get," Vul said.

Archive.org is a rabbit hole of audio, video and literature culled from decades worth of media. Like most rabbit holes, it's hard to know where to start — but it's hard to beat the old-timey charm of 1940s radio programs. Try searching out these to get started.

POLOGOOMBA/FICKR

Secrets Of Scotland Yard: A fantastic true crime series that aired from 1949-51 that's packed with rich British accents, nefarious characters and schemes targeting the crown jewels (of course) and "unsightly" wives.

Mel Blanc Radio Show: Mel Blanc, a.k.a. the voice of nearly every Looney Tunes character you've ever seen commit a horrifying act of violence, was handed the reins of his own show in the 40s where he developed an eponymous repair shop owner who has no business being in that line of work. Special guest stars include sadly obsolete words like "nincompoopery."

Orson Welles Radio Almanac: Readings from Shakespeare, 19th-century newspapers and presidential letters are among the highlights from this 1940s miscellany assembled by a true legend. A D-Day episode that dramatized news of the Normandy landing is essential listening.

RE: Don't Believe Everything You Think, says Metro's Paul Sullivan, published Oct. 30

While everyone is entitled to their own opinion, I think that publishing this article was in poor taste. Who is he to say what people can or cannot believe in? Just because science has proven that things don't exist, doesn't mean that we can't believe in them. Each and every person thinks and perceives (and believes) things in different ways, so to say to someone 'science proved this to be untrue; change your belief now,' is really low.

I also noticed that while angels, ghosts and Lucifer were touched upon, God was omitted. Why should you say that I can't believe in eternal damnation but eternal salvation is OK? If he was going to beat down those who believe in ghost and spirits, why not include those who believe in God?

Not to mention that while the article in whole is rude and condescending, the ending paragraph basically tells the readers that he is right and while people are bound to complain, they're nothing but 'trolls'.

DVD review

White House Down

Director. Roland Emmerich

Stars. Channing Tatum, Jamie Foxx

The word "excess" obviously doesn't appear in any dictionary owned by Roland Emmerich. There's no such thing as too much of anything to this most bellicose of filmmakers. So White House Down has exactly what you'd expect from the man and from the genre, only louder and dumber. If only he knew what to do with it. Emmerich can't seem to decide whether he's making a cautionary thriller about liberty's need for eternal vigilance or a blows-up-good buddy comedy featuring a bad-luck cop (Channing Tatum) and a badass prez (Jamie Foxx). Other films have car chases. This one has a car chase on the White House lawn, with the president inside an armoured limo brandishing a rocket launcher, trying to escape bad guys by blowing a hole in the iron fence. The only thing missing from this scene is a Duke of Hazzard soundtrack. Some Emmerich films are dumber than the others, and this is one of the really dumb times.

Record label's business is all about rocking the cradle

Rockabye Baby. CMH Label Group turns your favourite tunes into lullabies for baby — so you can sing along

PAT HEALY
Metro World News in Boston

Lisa Roth often finds herself giving unlikely advice to musicians who are covering songs by the likes of Black Sabbath, Guns N' Roses, Jay Z and Kanye West.

"A lot of the times it's, 'I want you to produce this like there's a baby sitting in your lap while you're doing it,'" she says.

As vice-president and creative director of the CMH Label Group, Roth oversees a branch of the label that produces the Rockabye Baby series, in which musicians have taken the aforementioned artists and created lullaby renditions of their best-known work.

Roth created the series with co-worker Valerie Aiello in 2006 and she has since overseen more than 50 releases.

This week sees the release of a Nickelback compilation.

"When we developed this idea, no one here had kids," says Roth. "I am not sure we would have thought about lullaby versions of Tool if we did have kids."

For the uninitiated, Rockabye Baby releases are like a private game of Name That Tune that parents can play while their little ones benefit from soothing arrangements of classic tunes. Where a song like the Foo Fighters' Monkey

Lisa Roth, the executive producer of Rockabye Baby. EARLY GIBSON

Wrench in its original incarnation is characterized by its hard guitars crunching up against bombastic drums and Dave Grohl's rock 'n' roll screams, the Rockabye Baby version is an instrumental playground, led by harmonizing glockenspiels and filled out by little bird chirps, rattles and cute honks.

CMH Label Group releases about eight compilations per year, working with a small handful of producers, and Roth says the back-and-forth with a producer for each release could take as long as six months.

"There's a certain amount of training that we have to go through with these people because it's kind of nuanced: It's not an easy thing to do. I think people have preconceived notions when it comes to a lullaby, as if you should just play quieter and slower, which is not the case at all," she says.

"First of all, we are a record label, not a children's company. The music, whether the consumer notices it or not, means a great deal to us."

Yes, the consumer in question is a baby, one who's unknowingly being introduced to the greatest pop music of the past few decades (yes, there are people who would put Nickelback into that category, sadly).

But the consumer is also the parent who can hear songs he or she already loves without having to suffer through nonsense by purple dinosaurs or men in brightly coloured turtle-necks.

"I get to spend chunks of my day doing this thing," says Roth, "and listening to music and deconstructing these songs and picking the instruments, and it's like painting a little picture, and trying to do it with utmost deference and respect to the artists so they don't get annoyed."

Dolly Parton

Plenty of members of the music community have offered Miley Cyrus unsolicited advice on how she's presenting herself, but don't expect Dolly Parton to join the chorus. "If she needs my opinion on something I will surely give it,

Lady and the Taylor: Are Gaga and her guy going to call it quits?

Lady Gaga and her Chicago Fire boyfriend, Taylor Kinney, have reportedly split up again, with Kinney citing her "insane workload" as an obstacle they can't get past, according to the Sun. "Taylor has told her she's married to her career and he can't deal with dating Gaga the mega-star and all her obsessions and alter-egos," a source says. "He loves the cool down-to-earth girl but hardly gets to see her." Seemingly proving Kinney's point, Gaga reportedly wants to address the issue — when she has a spare moment. "Gaga's hoping to meet up with Taylor when their schedule allow to talk things through," the source adds, but "Taylor told her they need time apart, and it's looking as if this might lead to a permanent split."

Workout. As Chris Hemsworth reprises his role in Thor: The Dark World, we speak to his personal trainer, Michael Knight, about how he stays fit

ROMINA
MCGUINNNESS
life@metronews.ca

"Once you get an actor to their desired shape, the tricky part is keeping them there — a lot of people tend to slack off," says Michael Knight, who's been training with Chris Hemsworth on and off for years.

Yeah, even the star of the new film Thor: The Dark World has a hard time maintaining that Viking god bod.

"Chris is in and out of movies, so the hardest part for me is making him lose weight quickly, and then getting him to put it back on without his body looking like hell," says Knight.

Hemsworth lost 30 pounds to play an F1 driver in Rush, and then had to put it right back on in time for Thor.

"So I always try and simulate that same workout in order to maintain his body shape in the long-term."

The maintenance workout designed by Knight specifically for Hemsworth revolves around three 20-minute sessions, which he does up to five times a week.

"My system is effective, and means you don't have to go out and do things that are going to tear up your body — like too much running or heavy weights," Knight said.

"The workout starts off slow and finishes with a fury. On some days, you're going into the time under tension method, which is where you're using really heavy weights to tire your core and kettle bells. On other days, you might be doing double kettle bells, or working with a heavy tire, and finishing with a cardio blast."

The Chris Hemsworth maintenance workout

If, like Hemsworth, you're already in shape, then this workout is going to keep your body strong. And it's all about big lifts.

"The idea is that you continually rotate body parts: so, one day you work your chest, the next day your back, then your shoulders, and then you go back to your chest, and so on. But you'll always be working the hips and the legs — they're the largest muscles in the body, and unless they get stronger, nothing else can," says Knight.

You're sometimes going to hit the same part twice in that week, sometimes once, but you're always going to start fresh again on Monday.

The workout is complicated, and unless you're think-

What's on Thor's plate?

When it comes to food, you need structure. Knight recommends you keep your diet clean by sticking to complex carbs, lean protein and healthy fats.

Monday

Chest day

You'll have rested on the Sunday, so today is a big barbell day. Your body is going to be torched.

Workout highlights

Barbell squats and barbell bench presses followed by double kettlebell front squats and inclined dumbbell presses.

Tuesday

Back day

You're going to be a little tired and sore from Monday. You want a total body workout that's intense, but not so hard it's going to crush your body.

Workout highlights

An active warm-up of one-legged dead lifts, followed by back weighted pull-ups, and double kettlebell circuits to work the hips and the core.

Wednesday

Day off

Thursday

Shoulder day

This is a big day as you're coming off from recovery. Go back to your barbells.

Workout highlights

An active warm-up of dead lifts and strong man log presses followed by light squats and thrusters. Finish with ropes gone wild.

Friday

Chest day

100 per cent dumbbell day. Give it a quick pump.

Workout highlights

Inclined dumbbell presses with squats, followed by push up circuits and kettlebell snatch.

Saturday

Back day

This is a "show me what you've got left" day.

Workout highlights

Unweighted pull-ups, dead lift heaven balls and a metabolic cardio circuit, followed by jump ropes.

Sunday

Day off.

Eggplant gets fried and spiced and everything nice

1. Heat the oven to 350 F. Sprinkle the eggplant slices lightly on both sides with salt. Transfer to a large colander, then set in the sink and let drain for 15 minutes.

2. Meanwhile, in bowl combine the flour, cumin, paprika and cayenne. In a second bowl, whisk egg and water. In third bowl, place the bread crumbs.

3. Pat eggplant slices dry. One at a time, dip each slice first in flour, shaking off excess, then the egg, letting the excess liquid drip off, then the bread crumbs, knocking off the excess crumbs (they will clump).

4. In skillet over high, heat 1 1/2 tablespoons of oil. Add eggplant slices, reduce heat to medium and cook until golden, about 2 minutes. Flip slices, add remaining tablespoon of olive oil and cook until golden on the second side, about 2 minutes.

5. Transfer the slices to a sheet pan. Bake on the oven's middle shelf until the slices are tender, about 15 minutes.

6. While the eggplant is baking, grate the cucumber on the coarse side of a grater. In a small bowl, combine the grated cucumber with the yogurt, garlic and a bit of salt.

Ingredients

- 1 small eggplant (1/2 pound and about 2 inches wide), cut crosswise into 1/3-inch-thick slices
- Kosher salt
- 2 tbsp all-purpose flour
- 1 tsp ground cumin
- 1 tsp smoked paprika
- 1/4 to 1/2 tsp cayenne
- 1 large egg
- 1 tbsp water
- 1 cup panko bread crumbs
- 2 1/2 tbsp extra-virgin olive oil, divided
- 2-inch piece seedless cucumber
- 1/2 cup fat-free plain Greek yogurt
- 1 small clove garlic, minced

7. To serve, transfer the eggplant slices to a platter and top each with a generous spoonful of the yogurt sauce. Sprinkle with parsley. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS/ SARA MOULTON, AUTHOR OF THREE COOKBOOKS, INCLUDING SARA MOULTON'S EVERYDAY FAMILY DINNERS.

You know by now that the whole eggs are bad for your cholesterol thing is a myth. Except for extreme cases, an egg a day is perfectly healthy and it brings with it omega 3 fat, protein and brain protecting choline.

These days, though, you can spread your wings and try more than the run of the mill hen variety. Check these out:

- Lisa Hill of Pheasant Hill Farm in Owen Sound, Ont. raises pheasant, guinea fowl, partridge and duck eggs. All of her birds can "dust bath, chase and eat bugs, scratch in the gardens, spread their wings out in the sunshine or fly up and perch in a tree," which provides them a broader variety of nutrients. You have to find her or another farmer like her at their farm gate or farmers market, though.

• Quail eggs are tiny, pretty additions to any dish and they are said to be more concentrated in nutrients. Likely a poor and expensive choice for an omelet but chefs suggest their use as a garnish.

• Duck eggs are more widely available, richer and bigger versions of the chicken egg. Found in specialty shops, Asian markets or high end grocers, these large, oily yolked options will make the best fried egg sandwich any brunch can muster. THERESA ALBERT IS A FOOD COMMUNICATIONS SPECIALIST AND PRIVATE NUTRITIONIST IN TORONTO. CarrotDating.com. Brandon Wade's newest app — which lets users bribe their way to a date — has stirred up controversy

MICHELLE CASTILLO
Metro World News

MIT grad Brandon Wade — king of controversial dating apps — has a new one stirring up controversy: Carrot Dating. CarrotDating.com allows men and women to offer incentives — called "bribes" — to one another in order to snag a date. While some incentives are as innocent as flowers or dinner, others include a big trip or plastic surgery.

This comes on the heels of Wade's other ventures, sites like SeekingArrangement.com and WhatsYourPrice.com, which hooked up rich men with willing women. Wade insists this isn't prostitution, nor sexist. In fact, 25 per cent of the bribes are initiated by women, he claims. We asked him more about the slippery slope.

Maybe CarrotDating.com is behind this odd couple? ISTOCK

So Carrot Dating is...?

Carrot Dating really is bribing somebody for a date. I think when you look at most of my other dating websites, they were founded primarily from my mother's advice because I was really shy and sort of awkward. My mom saw that, and she basically told me to focus on my school. She said, "Some day when you're successful, you'll be generous and turn those around, when it comes to the dating game." Until I graduated, I was still struggling and still had the constant fear of rejection. I would never walk up to woman and use a pick up line. It's not my thing.

What you call generosity could be confused with prostitution. Do you agree?

How does generosity equal prostitution? That's a really long stretch! Prostitution is literally paying for sex. In this case, sex cannot be expected. It's something people obviously aspire to, especially on a dating site — they look for someone they share chemistry with. When you look at Carrot Dating, when you look at the most popular types of offers that people have been offering and accepting — the first one being flowers, the second one being dinners — that's what people do nowadays anyway. He usually buys her dinner or flowers. And that's certainly not prostitution.

So why are critics calling the site misogynistic?

(Laughs) Maybe because we called it bribes, as opposed to incentives. Even incentives would be a little bit edgy. I think if we had called it something else, maybe something a little bit less playful or controversial, it wouldn't have caused as much of an uproar.

Have you ever used any of your websites?

I created Seeking Arrangement because I was just so frustrated with dating. I created that for myself. I was a user; had the very first profile on there.

Did you meet your wife through a dating website or traditionally?

Traditionally, I guess. She applied for a job, and we hired her, and I was working with her, and we kind of started dating and we fell in love and that's kind of the story. In a way, it was because of the websites that I built.

Research the kind of jobs posted by various temp agencies, and if a number of them match your skill set, contact the agency to ask about setting up an interview with a recruiter. ISTOCK

Why the temp life may be right up your alley

Employment. Makeshift work has a bad rap, but it can prove useful for a variety of job seekers

YOUR MONEY
Alison Griffiths
money@metronews.ca

Does any of the following describe you?

- Self-employed with some hours to spare.
- A stay-at-home parent not ready for a full-time job.
- A young worker with skills but little experience.
- In-between permanent jobs.
- A retiree still eager to work.

If one of these profiles fits, then you might be perfect for the temp world. "Temporary work is also a good fit for anyone looking to gain additional experience and skills or obtain experience in a new field," says Shari Angle, Toronto-based vice president with Adecco, Canada's largest temporary recruitment agency.

There are temp agencies specializing in every industry and skill set from labourers to scientists. Not surprisingly, demand is tied to the economy.

"The temporary staffing market across Canada has fall seasonal demand in the areas of distribution, logistics, and warehousing which specifically drive temporary hiring in geographic areas near airports and ports of entry," points out Angle.

Wherever there is a strong economy and low unemployment, such as in Saskatchewan and Alberta right now, the availability of temp positions rises.

In Wild Rose country, for instance, there's a strong need for workers in a many areas

The upside of temping

"I've had great assignments and lousy ones. But I always know they will come to an end."

Calgary computer programmer Terri McGinnis that support the oil and gas industry.

Temp workers can also be in demand during a poor economy because employers are reluctant to hire full time staff.

Temp work can lead into a career. Dawn Johnson, for example, took a handful of placements as a health-care accountant.

Her most recent assignment lasted 18 months and then turned into a full-time job in Columbus, Ohio.

For some, the appeal of temp work is that it's, well, temporary. Calgary computer programmer Terri McGinnis travels with her husband on his contracts around the world as a forestry consultant. "I've had great assignments and lousy ones," she laughs, "but I always know they will come to an end."

As with seeking any kind of work, the best place to start is a well-crafted resume and reference letters. Angle stresses that people should research the kind of jobs posted by various agencies. If a number match your skill set, contact the agency directly to inquire about an interview with a recruiter.

The first few positions can take a bit of time, but once you've established yourself as a reliable employee, an agency will be eager to keep you busy.

MAKE AN IMPACT WITH SUCCESS COLLEGE

Success College is all about passion and pride by providing career training in industries that make a difference, such as counselling, child youth care, law enforcement, medical administration, and many more.

"Our graduates pursue satisfying, rewarding careers that impact their lives and the lives of others," says Janice Currie, director, Success College.

Since 1893, Success College has been training graduates to excel in their chosen profession through hands-on, practical experience.

"With over 100 years of experience behind us, we're confident that our model of career education has evolved to offer the optimal combination of classroom instruction, practical hands-on learning and on-the-job experience," Currie says.

Every program is taught by industry experts, and students benefit directly from the breadth and depth of their experience.

And the curriculum is developed so you finish a two-year program in just 60 weeks and includes eight weeks of valuable on-the-job training.

To learn more, schedule a time to take a personal tour of the school, meet with an admissions adviser, and even sit in on a class.

To schedule your personal tour of Success College, call an admissions advisers at 1-800-662-3991, or visit successcollege.ca to view a full list of programming options.

NEW PROGRAMS AT MARITIME BUSINESS COLLEGE

Consistent with its mission of being a pioneer in the field of career training, Maritime Business College has added three new programs.

"The college prides itself on delivering relevant, practical knowledge and skills that is the foundation for a successful career," says Janice Currie, director, Maritime Business College.

The first new program is the veterinary technician program.

"Our new veterinary technician program is the first and only one of its kind in HRM," says Currie.

A veterinary technician works closely with the veterinarian and is trained to assess symptoms and diagnose and treat illnesses under the direct supervision of a vet. But for many common cases, little to no assessment by the primary veterinarian is needed.

Maritime Business College has also added an innovative program to develop anaesthesia technicians.

Anaesthetic technicians are mainly employed by anaesthetic departments or operating theatre suites, but can be found in other areas of clinical practice including emergency departments, intensive care units, and day surgery clinics.

And the third new offering at MBC is the travel and hospitality program, which will prepare students for a wide range of rewarding and challenging careers.

So far so good, says Mooseheads GM

QMJHL. With the emergence of players like rookie Ehlers, Herd has earned top spot in Maritimes Division with a 14-8 record

andrew.rankin@metronews.ca

Like many Halifax Mooseheads fans, the line of rookie Nikolaj Ehlers, Brent Andrews and Andrew Ryan, intrigues Cam Russell.

Of course, the Mooseheads general manager is impressed with the trio's point production. They are the top three scorers on the team, starting with Ehlers with 28 points, then Ryan (26), and Andrews (23).

But it's about more than that. There's the satisfaction he gets from the chemistry they share, their ability to draw the best out of each other.

"The line has good speed, good size and good skill," said Russell. "You have such a nice combination of everything and they really compliment each other."

About a third of the way into the season, Russell has reason to be encouraged, from Darcy Ashley's offensive outburst (22 points in 11 games played), to the subtle improvements he sees in the team's 10 rookies, who are adjusting to new systems and the rigors of a grueling schedule.

"We're pleased where we

Mooseheads rookie forward Nikolaj Ehlers leads the team in scoring with 28 points. JEFF HARPER/METRO

Top Moosheads scorers

	GP	G	A	PTS
Nikolaj Ehlers	22	10	18	28
Andrew Ryan	22	12	14	26
Brent Andrews	20	9	14	23
Jonathan Drouin	12	7	16	23
Darcy Ashley	11	10	12	22

are right now. We have a lot more work ahead of us. We're trying to find the right chemistry, the right line combinations. It's a continuing process of developing players," Russell said.

Boasting a record of 14-8, the Mooseheads currently sit atop the Maritimes Division, six points ahead of the slumping Charlottetown Islanders.

But Russell stopped short of calling his team's early success a surprise.

"We looked at our team a couple of years ago and we felt we were going to have more than just one strong year.

"Our coaching staff, they've done an extremely good job for the past three years."

There has been plenty of good luck mixed in, such as the return of Jonathan Drouin in late September. After being cut by the Tampa Bay Lightning, the CHL's reigning MVP has recorded 23 points in 12 games, tying him with Andrews for third in team scoring.

But Russell isn't resting easy. Nor is he ruling out player moves during the Christmas trade window.

"You never know. We'll evaluate. Anything could happen ... but there's no desperate need right now."

The Herd is back in action at the Metro Centre against the Moncton Wildcats on Friday at 8 p.m.

New Glasgow's Sim scores tryout with Tigers

New Glasgow's Jon Sim has signed a 25-game professional tryout contract with the AHL's Bridgeport Sound Tigers.

He is expected to suit up with the team against the Hershey Bears on Saturday.

Sim spent a portion of last year's AHL season with the San Antonio Rampage before moving to the Adirondack Phantoms after 22 games. In total he played 56 games between the two teams, scoring 12 goals and 32 points.

Sim spent time with the Tigers, the New York Islanders AHL affiliate, in 2008-09 and 2010-11. In 162 regular-season games (2007-08 to 2010-11) with the Islanders Sim had 23 goals and 42 points. He also added 20 goals and 32 points in 26 games with Bridgeport.

Horoscopes

Aries

March 21 - April 20

Try not to be too aggressive when dealing with people at work. In fact, with Venus, planet of harmony, moving into the career area of your chart today, you should go out of your way to be nice.

Taurus

April 21 - May 21

Something you say today will have far-reaching consequences, so be on your best behaviour. Everything you put out into the world sooner or later comes back to you.

Gemini

May 22 - June 21

You may feel you are being treated unfairly but complaining about it is unlikely to change the situation. Act as if you are completely unaffected by what other people say.

Cancer

June 22 - July 23

Someone you meet today will tick all the right boxes. You will get along as if you've known each other for a lifetime. It's going to be a beautiful new friendship and, who knows, it may even be love.

Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

Don't push yourself hard today. Whatever tasks you have, there is no need to rush. This is one of those days when the world must, and will, wait for you.

Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

There are times when you should hold out for the best possible deal and there are times when you should compromise and this is one of the latter. Don't forget that profit is not the only thing to measure relationships by.

Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

Today's positive cosmic influences will help you get your point of view across but don't forget that your view is one of many. There is plenty of room in this big, wide world for all shades of opinion.

Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

Keep your ears open today and, if you hear a distant rumble, get yourself to higher ground as quickly as you can. There is some kind of upheaval coming and you don't want to be in the way when it arrives.

Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

You may have failed but that does not mean you are a failure. Smart people realize that failure is a brick in the wall of success. The more bricks you have, the higher you can build your dream.

Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

You may feel assertive today but don't push people around you too hard because you are likely to spark some sort of rebellion. Always see partners as human beings, not mere cogs in your grand design.

Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

If someone gives you a hard time over the next 24 hours, you should smile and let them see it does not bother you. They will go and find someone who is easier to annoy.

Pisces

Feb. 20 - March 20

Stop worrying about things that might go wrong. It's not about what you can and cannot do, it's about your attitude to life in general. SALLY BROMPTON
